This piece is entitled "Intersection". It celebrates not only bicycles in general, but once again, addresses the strong heritage in architectural blacksmithing in the Aspen community. This design depicts two bicycles crossing over each other, and depicted in a vary fashionable, stylized blacksmith fashion. From a bird's eye view, the entire piece can be seen in an S curve..... so that the bikes coming in are parked on a 'convex' curve and allow for not only a pleasant esthetic, but also a practical application. This project will be mounted in four places on the ground, and will be well anchored to the ground. It depicts the love of mountain biking for the local area, but also presents a very unique and artistic expression for the overall piece.
